2010 will be a challenging year...

Budget 2009 flagged plans to cut $45 million from teacher staffing budgets in 2011 and $50 million in 2012. Consider what else has already been said:

"Nurses and teachers would be regarded by the public as having among the most secure jobs in the economy right now... But the days of going to Ministers and getting large increases at the expense of the taxpayer, without any productivity gains, are over."

Finance Minister Bill English, May 2009

"The Government does not intend to produce or issue league tables, but we are not going to change the law to prevent information being released to the school's community and to parents."

Education Minister Anne Tolley, May 2009

"Nowhere is it written that the government must own education property or even employ teachers and staff."

Associate Education Minister Heather Roy, July 2009
